5 THINGS TO KNOW

ALEX KORAB, EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Here we are: The president of the United States will meet the leader of North Korea in a historic summit to try and bring peace to the Korean peninsula. Or you can look at it another way: A 71-year-old infantile egomaniac will meet a 36-year-old infantile egomaniac and they will discuss the size of their rockets. No one knows what will happen — it could be anything from a Nobel Prize to total annihilation. One thing's for sure: It won't be boring. So check metro.us for the latest updates and pick up Wednesday's Metro for the analysis. Well ... if there will be Wednesday ...

74 ARRESTED IN GLOBAL EMAIL FRAUD CRACKDOWN

I U.S. authorities said on Monday that 74 people had been arrested in a global crackdown on email fraud scams, in which criminals have attempted to steal billions of dollars from businesses and individuals. The cases involve a growing type of fraud known as "business email compromise" that targets employees with access to corporate finances. The fraudsters send emails that appear to be from trusted corporate executives or vendors, which instruct targeted employees to wire funds to accounts controlled by criminals. The same groups also ran similar scams targeting individuals, including real-estate buyers and the elderly, the bureau said. Nearly $2.4 million was seized in the six-month operation dubbed "Operation Wire Wire" and about $14 million in fraudulent wire transfers was recovered, according to the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation. Of those arrested, 42 were in the United States, 29 in Nigeria, and the others in Canada, Mauritius, and Poland, the FBI said.

TEXAS FAMILY SUES U.S. OVER CHURCH MASSACRE

2 A couple whose nine relatives were among the 26 people fatally shot in a Texas church massacre in November has sued the U.S. government for $50 million, saying its "institutional failures" played a part in the murders, court filings on Friday showed. The lawsuit filed this week in federal court in Texas and made public on Friday said the U.S. Air Force acted negligently when it failed to report the criminal record of gunman Devin Kelley to a U.S. database, which could have prevented him from legally purchasing an assault rifle used in the killings. Air Force officials were not immediately available for comment but have previously said they do not comment on specific claims. Legal experts have said the Air Force would not be able to claim federal immunity in the case, but cautioned any lawsuits faced a prolonged battle. The lawsuit was filed on behalf of the parents of Bryan Holcombe, who was near the pulpit of the small church in Sutherland Springs when Kelley opened fire. Holcombe was shot in the back and died on the church's floor. The family lost eight others in the attack.

SECURITY SCARE DIVERTS FLIGHT TO IRELAND

4 A United Airlines flight from Rome to Chicago was diverted to Ireland's Shannon Airport on Monday after a message perceived as a potential security concern was discovered onboard, Irish police and airline officials said. The message made reference to a bomb on the plane, a source with knowledge of the investigation told Reuters. The 207 passengers and 11 crew members disembarked from the Boeing 767-330 at Shannon Airport at 2:15 p.m. local time, according to Jim Molloy, a representative of Ireland's police force. The passengers of flight UA971 were in the process of being searched, he said in an emailed statement, but gave no further details about the nature of the threat. United said in a statement that the landing was due to "a potential security concern," but declined to comment further. "After assessing the situation, our crew made the decision to divert to the nearest available airport," it said. "Additional security screenings will be performed on all customers and baggage." The airline said on Twitter that the flight was canceled and would depart for Chicago on Tuesday.

DENNIS RODMAN ARRIVES IN SINGAPORE

5 Former NBA star Dennis Rodman arrived in Singapore late on Monday for a summit between U.S. President Donald Trump and North Korean leader Kim Jong Un, saying he was "excited to be part of it." There has been no indication Rodman would be involved in any official talks at the summit, which is aimed at getting North Korea to give up its nuclear weapons and missiles in exchange for economic incentives and security guarantees. "It should go fairly well, but people should not expect so much for the first time," Rodman told reporters at the airport. "The doors are opening." Trump, asked last week if Rodman had been invited to Singapore, said, "No, he wasn't." Rodman is one of a handful of Westerners to have visited reclusive North Korea and met Kim. He most recently traveled there a year ago as a private citizen. After that five-day visit, Rodman told reporters, "I'm just trying to open the door." This trip, like the last one, is sponsored by potcoin.com, the cryptocurrency provider for the legal marijuana industry, Rodman said on Twitter.

While pleased with progress, Baker says MBTA 'needs improvement'

The state is planning an $8.5 billion investment on improvements to the T over the next five years.

ham Democrat who is one of the three men running against Baker, offered a contrasting view on Sunday, saying in a television interview that the state needs additional revenue for transportation and education.

Despite what he called a "tremendous amount of work" put into public transit infrastructure, when Gov. Charlie Baker was asked in a radio interview where he'd give his administration a needs-improvement grade, he pointed to the T.

"While I'm pleased with the progress we've made on the MBTA, we have a long way to go there," Baker said Friday in an hourlong interview on WBUR's "Radio Boston."

A planned $8.5 billion investment into the T over the next five years will be the "single-biggest five-year investment by a mile, ever, in the public transportation system," he said, and increase both capacity and reliability.

"I think that will significantly enhance and encourage people's interest in riding it, but I would give us as an administration a needs improvement on that one," he said.

Baker, who is running for re-election, defended his vision for the T, which focuses on using current revenues to improve service in the existing system. His transit plans do not lean on tax hikes to pay for repairs or new projects, though the MBTA is expected to consider a fare increase in 2019.

"You know what my vision is? Making the thing work," Baker said. "Making it reliable and dependable enough so that somebody would get out of their car and take it because they believe it's going to get them where they need to go, and I would argue that when we took office, that was the biggest problem with the public transportation system, not that it didn't go to enough places."

Jay Gonzalez, a Need-

Gonzalez supports a potential ballot question that would impose a surtax on incomes over $1 million, with the revenue generated designated for education and transportation. Baker has declined to stake out a position on the surtax.

"While I'm pleased with the progress we've made on the MBTA, we have a long way to go there."

Gov. Charlie Baker

"In my view, it's not good enough to jack up fares on riders, cut service for underserved communities on the T, privatize the system," Gonzalez said on WCVB's "On the Record." "I'm going to make the investments we need to make sure people can depend on our transportation system to get to work on time. I'm going to fire Keolis, the private operator of the commuter rail and bring that under our management, to make sure that we are making progress on these issues that affect regular people."

Gonzalez, the Democratic Party's endorsed gubernatorial candidate, said Baker "has no plan" when it comes to the T.

Baker, on WBUR, said riders should expect "a continuous upgrading" of the T's Red, Orange and Green lines over the next five to 10 years as new cars arrive and are brought into service, increasing capacity on each line by about 50 percent.

Trump, Kim meet for historic Singapore summit

But whether progress will be made between the U.S. and North Korea remains anyone's guess.

MIGUEL VELAZQUEZ
letters@metro.us

The U.S. and North Korea are waiting with bated breath for a summit that is set to happen Tuesday, after almost 70 years of bitter rivalry between the two countries.

The encounter between President Donald Trump and dictator Kim Jong Un is considered one of the hardest-to-predict events in diplomatic history and will certainly be remembered for centuries to come — no matter the result.

"We have to be realistic with expectations," Ali Riaz, professor of political science at Illinois State University explained to Metro. "I don't expect a dramatic breakthrough. Instead I expect both leaders to lay out their terms and expectations. Kim Jong Un will have his wish list, which will include security assurance and promises of immediate economic assistance from the U.S. He will try to push for a commitment from Trump of U.S. withdrawal from the region. Trump, on the other hand, is expected to ask for an announcement of denuclearization with a clear roadmap."

Prior to the summit, Kim Jong Un basked in the global spotlight as well after meeting with his southern counterpart, South Korea President Moon Jae-in, in April this year. During the peace talks, he already committed to "complete denuclearization" of the country, aiming to establish permanent peace on the peninsula.

On the other hand, Trump's administration constantly insisted on "complete, verifiable and irreversible" denuclearization, but now took a step back and agreed on the process to happen "by phases."

In any case, this decision goes beyond North Korea and the U.S. The allied countries of each side are also anxiously waiting for the results of this historic encounter.

"I don't think Kim is acting without the consent of China," Riaz concluded. "Any agreement will have to have the blessings of Chinese leadership. An agreement which will reduce U.S. presence and influence in the region is not only beneficial to China, but is its primary strategic objective. Same goes with Russia. The invitation to Kim by Putin indicates that Russia doesn't want to be left out. Japan has most to lose if Trump agrees to a bad deal about regional security. South Korea will remain the key player in going forward; without South Korea on board there won't be any success."

Q&A

SUNG-YOON LEE
Professor of Korean studies at Kim Koo-Korea Foundation

What should we expect from this summit?

Both Trump and Kim will gain political victories from the summit. Trump will claim to have defused a tense stand-off, tamed the North Korean leader, and compelled North Korea to start the process of denuclearization. But Kim Jong Un will walk away with far bigger gains. Kim will have engaged the U.S. in yet another protracted negotiation process with no final negotiated agreement in sight, during which time he will buy time and money with which to perfect his own nuclear posture review. In fact, North Korea will have deterred the U.S. from even thinking about a preemptive strike, compelled the U.S. and other UN member states to stop enforcing sanctions against Pyongyang, laid the foundation for the resumption of generous aid from South Korea and China, and deterred other states from ramping up diplomatic pressure against Pyongyang. "Maximum pressure" will be dead.

Will denuclearization come quickly?

North Korea will make small concessions like readmitting IAEA inspectors into its main nuclear site in Yongbyon, etc., but stall on dismantling its nuclear apparatuses or shipping out nuclear warheads. A nation that has worked for half a century to develop nukes and has to contend with a far more successful, freer, richer Korean state across the border does not bargain away the one ace card (nuclear threat capability) it has that may one day enable the inferior North to prevail over the superior South.

Could both leaders reach an agreement?

Pyongyang has been playing this two-act play, provocation followed by placation (provoke relentlessly, then change the tune from molto agitato to placido and put on a fake peace play), for decades. For Pyongyang, it always pays to provoke. But it pays even more to placate after provoking. After a banner ballistic year in 2017, in which Kim established his threat credibility, 2018 is the perfect time to reap the harvest on the seeds of provocations. Pyongyang is very crafty, and does not just escalate endlessly. It knows when to come down a rung or two.

What will happen if things go wrong?

South Korea has grown rich over the past decades; hence, it favors de-escalation and the status quo. Seoul does not seek a German model of unification, absorption of the less successful neighbor. On the other hand, North Korea has to live with a richer South that is a magnet to its own people; hence, it favors the Vietnamese model of unification, communization by force.

At the U.N. General Assembly, Donald Trump stated he could destroy North Korea. Do you expect him to take those words back?

It will be politically difficult for Trump to walk away first from a deal he has endorsed. Hence, Trump will try to cling on to the agreement, even as North Korea demurs, cheats, and blatantly violates the deal. Advantage North Korea.

What role do China, South Korea, Japan and Russia play?

In the next few months, Kim will hold summit meetings with Vladimir Putin and Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe, further bolstering his own image as a legitimate global statesman instead of a ruthless, weird dictator. It's exactly what his father, Kim Jong Il, did in 2000-2002. Kim Jong Il made his first visit to China as the national leader in May 2000, held the first-ever inter-Korean summit in June (and pocketed $500 million in cash from the South), received President Putin in Pyongyang in July, sent a special envoy to President Clinton in October, received Secretary of State Madeleine Albright in Pyongyang later the same month, paid another visit to China in January 2001, visited Putin in Moscow in August that year, and received Japanese Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi in Pyongyang in Sept 2002. As a result, Kim got his neighbors to legitimate him as a reasonable leader with whom the U.S. could do nuclear business. Kim Jong Un is doing the same today, and Trump is walking right into this elaborate trap.

A LOOK AT NORTH KOREA'S 6 ALLIES

China: The powerful nation has traditionally been North Korea's closest ally, its neighbor to the north and west. But since Kim took power in 2011, the relationship has cooled. Chinese President Xi Jinping is said to have a low opinion of Kim and his nuclear weapons program. Beijing has repeatedly asked Pyongyang to cease its nuclear tests and ballistic missile launches in vain.

Russia: U.S. relations with Russia have cooled tremendously, and are at their worst since the end of the Cold War, as stated by its foreign ministry. So it comes as no surprise that Moscow has remained silent on the current U.S.-North Korea situation. North Korea shares a narrow north-easterly border with Russia, and the two nations have been close allies since the Cold War.

Bulgaria: North Korea made an alliance with Bulgaria when it was under communist rule in 1948, and signed a bilateral cooperation agreement in 1970. Bulgaria is now Kim's only ally in Europe.

Benin: Yet another former communist state with ties to North Korea. In 2013, North Korean state media quoted ex-President of Benin, Thomas Boni Yayim, describing relations between North Korea and Benin as "excellent ones of friendship and tradition."

The Democratic Republic of Congo: North Korea has forged ties with the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC), which is notoriously unstable.

Madagascar: North Korea has an unlikely historic alliance with Madagascar. During the 1970s, North Korea helped to build the fledgling state's presidential lavoloha Palace and new waterways free of charge.

Season two of "Goliath" premieres this weekend. ALL PHOTOS BY AMAZON

Binge this now: Why you should watch Amazon's 'Goliath'

Billy Bob Thornton returns as disgraced lawyer Billy McBride.

ANDREW HUSBAND
letters@metro.us

Depending on who you ask, Billy Bob Thornton winning the Best Actor in a Drama Series trophy was one of the biggest surprises at the 2017 Golden Globe Awards. Your point of view will be informed by whether you had watched, let alone even heard of, the freshman Amazon series "Goliath." A legal drama created by television veteran David E. Kelley ("Ally McBeal," "The Practice"), the show follows disgraced lawyer named Billy McBride's (Thornton) attempt to redeem himself.

All eight episodes of the second season will begin streaming Friday, June 15, on Amazon

Prime. Instead of angling for his old law firm, however, season two finds McBride taking on a murder case against a young boy pro bono, much to fellow lawyer Patty Solis-Papagian's (Nina Arianda) annoyance. Aside from season one's returning cast, these new episodes feature recurring and guest appearances by Mark Duplass, Lou Diamond Phillips and David Cross.

What is it about?

Before he became "disgraced," McBride was half of the successful law firm Cooperman McBride, which he co-founded with his then-partner, Donald Cooperman (William Hurt). After a murder suspect he got acquitted later killed an entire family, however, McBride washed out, fell deeper into alcoholism and took up residence at an extended-stay hotel on the Santa Monica Pier.

Billy Bob Thornton earned a Golden Globe Award in 2017 for his performance in the hit Amazon series.

When occasional cases don't turn him sober, his daughter, Denise (Diana Hopper), tries to.

Much like fellow Amazon series "Bosch," "Goliath" tells a different story arc each season. Many of the core characters and plot points remain the same, but the rest changes depending on whatever the arc demands. Season one had McBride pursue a wrongful-death suit against one of his former firm's biggest clients, putting him at odds with his ex-partner and many others. Season two, however, sees McBride take a murder case pro bono that may not be what it seems.

Why you should binge it

"Goliath" is worth a binge for three reasons. First, it's short. This isn't the most important reason, of course, but with "Peak TV" in full swing these days, time is precious, and the less time a new piece of entertainment takes, the better. The second and third reasons "Goliath" is worth your time are Thornton himself and the creative team behind the camera. The latter has suffered some turmoil, but the show has yet to suffer as a result.

Meet the cast

Again, Thornton is the main pull behind "Goliath," and for good reason. His Golden Globe Award-winning turn as McBride is simultaneously enjoyable and difficult to watch. But he's not the only fantastic part of the series. Arianda's Patty and Hopper's Denise keep the star on his toes, as does paralegal-cum-escort Brittany Gold (Tania Raymonde). Meanwhile, season two adds Ana de la Reguera, Morris Chestnut, Duplass, Phillips and Cross to the mix.

How to binge

All eight episodes of "Goliath" season one are available to stream for all Amazon Prime subscribers. When they drop Friday, June 15, all eight episodes of season two will also be available on Amazon Prime.

'Tag' is the 'big, studio comedy' Jake Johnson has been dying to make

"We all knew what we were trying to do."

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

It's hard to pin Jake Johnson down. While Johnson played Nick Miller in "New Girl" for seven seasons, he balanced that out with leading parts in the indie hits "Safety Not Guaranteed" and "Drinking Buddies," supporting roles in the blockbusters "Jurassic World" and "The Mummy," and he even branched out to cowrite "Digging for Fire" and "Win It All." Johnson's eclectic career choices have clearly worked wonders so far, as his inherent warmth and goofiness immediately elevates any project he is involved in.

These qualities have also always meant that Johnson would be the ideal addition to any mainstream comedic ensemble. Which, coincidentally, was the next cinematic box that Johnson wanted to tick off. That made the offer of Randy "Chilli" Chilliario in "Tag" just too good to turn down, as the outrageous comedy revolves around a group of tight-knit friends and the 30-year-long game of tag that kept them together.

Johnson recently told Metro that the immediate appeal of "Tag" was that it was a "big, studio comedy."

"We all knew what we were trying to do," Johnson says of his castmates Ed Helms,

"Tag" races into theaters this weekend.
WARNER BROS. PICTURES

Jeremy Renner, Jon Hamm and Hannibal Buress. "And I thought, 'The laughs are good. There's a lot of fun set-pieces. It is ridiculous. It has some heart. There was nothing in it that I thought was offensive or mean-spirited.'"

"I really wanted to make a popcorn movie," he adds. "Where people could just go, and if they didn't want to see a big franchise movie, or a sequel or a remake, if they just wanted to sit down and watch a big-laugh comedy with an ensemble that you like. I thought that was accomplished and that made me happy."

Johnson's positivity for "Tag" bled into its production, as the actor insisted it was just fun to make the movie with a "really good group of people." Unfortunately, those good vibes didn't manifest into an impromptu game of on-set tag, though.

"I am 40 years old," Johnson says. "I don't have much interest in playing tag. I have interest in shooting a movie about tag. So there was no running around and tagging each other."

Which was probably for the best because Renner managed to break both of his arms

The ultimate game of tag heads to the big screen. KYLE KAPLAN/WARNER BROS. PICTURES just while shooting "Tag." Johnson made it very clear that he wasn't to blame for these injuries, pointing out that he didn't see the scene being shot. Although he did joke that it was "probably" somehow his fault indirectly.

It isn't a surprise to learn that Johnson didn't partake in a game of tag during production; he says he didn't even really like to play it when he was a child.

Instead, he just focused on "playing make-believe and wearing goofy clothes and wigs and using funny voices." Johnson is more than aware that that has paid dividends, as he enthusiastically pointed out "now I do it professionally."

"Tag" opens in theaters on June 15.

Feast on the best bites Somerville has to offer when this tasty fest returns this week. Now in its 20th year, the annual Taste of Somerville event celebrates the city's eclectic culinary and nightlife scenes with great food and drink offerings, live entertainment, family-friendly fun and more. Here's everything you need to know about this year's fest.

When is it?
Taste of Somerville 2018 will take over the Nathan Tufts Park in Powderhouse Square on Wednesday, June 13, between 5 p.m. and 8 p.m. Tickets to the event are $50 for general admission, while kids 12 and under can attend for just $15. VIP tickets are also available for $75 and include a few extra perks, such as exclusive tastings, wine pairings plus hand-crafted cocktails by United Liquors. All proceeds from the event will go to benefit the Walnut Street Center, a local nonprofit that focuses on providing self-advocacy and community involvement support to vulnerable citizens around the city.

What food and drinks will be there?

Dozens of amazing food and drink vendors will be on hand to serve up some vino, brews and, of course, a ton of great grub. "It's no secret that Somerville has become one of the driving forces in the culinary scene of greater Boston in recent years, almost to the point where it can be hard to keep up with all of the new offerings," organizer Luke O'Neil said in a statement. "What we try to do here is make that a little more manageable, so you can taste a little bit of all of it all in one place on one day. Although maybe don't eat 75 different dishes, that might not be a good idea." Highlights for this year's fest include Aero-naut Brewery, Bantam Cider, Browyn, Five Horses Tavern, J.P. Licks, Mr. Crepe, Oath Pizza, Samuel Adams, Tenoch Mexican, Whole Heart Provisions and Zero Gravity Brewing.

What else is happening?

There's a ton of stuff going on besides all the food and drink tastings. A pop-up playground jungle and a firetruck from the Somerville Fire Department will be on hand to keep the little ones entertained, while adults can have some fun with games of cornhole, foosball and bocce. DJ Nate Bluhm will also be on hand to provide the beats.

Everything about this Patriots off-season has been odd.

MATT BURKE
matthew.burke@metro.us

Where there's smoke there's fire, and the smoke emanating from Foxboro over the past few months has been enough to make one gag. There is a real power struggle going on with the Patriots right now, and it's likely not going to cease until one of the major players in this whole thing is out of town or retired.

NBC Sports Boston's Tom Curran nixed a strong rumor that the Pats were ready to trade Rob Gronkowski last Friday, but Curran later wrote that the Pats have looked at trading Gronk during this tumultuous off-season.

Reporter Adam Kurkjian tweeted that Bill Belichick had deals in place with the Titans and 49ers but Robert Kraft put a halt to the Pats trading Gronk when Tom Brady threatened to retire if one of the deals went through. That is some heady stuff.

Kurkjian doubled down on his reporting Monday when he was a guest of WEEF's "Kirk and Callahan."

"I was first tipped off that something was going down [last] Thursday and I started to get very specific information on Friday," Kurkjian said. "The first piece of information I got was Brady was willing to retire over something like this. It turned out to be a trade with Rob Gronkowski. I asked around. I didn't believe any of it. I was not looking to break any of this because I didn't believe any of it until I started asking around. When you get a tip like this, you have to be very careful because the information is very sensitive."

"Ever since all of this has come out, I've privately gotten a lot of confirmations. I've got zero denials," Kurkjian continued. "I was able to chase this only because the information I was getting was so specific, including the names of the teams. When you have stuff like that coming in you almost have to – as a journalist – seek it out to see if it's true. I wasn't looking to break a story, and honestly if I didn't get that last domino to fall from somebody who I trust – who knows just as much as [Patriots PR representative] Stacey James – there is no tweet and there is no story and I just go on with my Friday night as usual."

The MMQB's Albert Breer was the first to float that the Patriots would be interested in moving on from No. 87.

"No matter how you look at [Gronk], he's high maintenance. With what we've seen from the Patriots in the past is with high-maintenance players, they'll put up with it while they're still productive at the highest level," Breer said in the fall of 2016. "Doing all of that works – trying to keep him healthy and breaking all of the rules you have for everyone else to keep him on board. Eventually a guy's production doesn't match what it takes to do all of that. We saw that with Randy Moss. They were willing to put up with all the crap with Randy Moss until it wasn't worth it anymore because he couldn't play. He could be the surprise trade guy down the line."

Mike Florio of Pro Football Talk believes all is not lost when it comes to the Patriots and Gronkowski and that most of this noise is posturing by the Pats as they negotiate a new contract with Gronk.

"Chatter regarding a potential trade of Patriots tight end Rob Gronkowski continues to bubble up from time to time in part because Gronkowski has yet to get a new contract," Florio wrote. "And a new contract won't be coming in the immediate future. Per a source with knowledge of the situation, a new contract for Gronkowski is 'likely,' but nothing is imminent."
